Jean-Marc Yacé, Mayor of Cocody and President of the IOPD, opened the session by greeting all the members of the assembly and emphasizing that this is the first time in 20 years that the annual assembly has met in a virtual format, due to the restrictions caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. He noted that as an organization we have been resilient during the pandemic, and that we remain optimistic about the future of participatory democracy in the world. He thanked the IOPD for the trust placed in Cocody to organize the 20th conference. Although the context has not been easy, the mayor emphasizes that they have been able to overcome the challenges and to successfully organize the sessions around the axes: local economic development, environment and citizen participation, the right to the city, and governance and participatory democracy. Jean-Marc Yace thanked the panelists and conference participants and emphasized that the proceedings of the sessions are available on the conference website in French, English, Spanish and Portuguese. On behalf of the City Council and the population of Cocody and the entire Ivory Coast, he wished the city of Grenoble a good presidency and made himself available to the Mayor of Grenoble to provide all possible support.

Clara Brugada, Mayor of Iztapalapa and co-president of the IOPD greets the entire IOPD membership two years after the last assembly in Iztapalapa. She recognizes and congratulates the work done by Cocody and the General Secretariat in the hands of Barcelona during the whole period of the pandemic. She congratulates the organization of the 20th conference in Cocody and during these days in virtual format. She affirms that participatory democracy has been challenged by social isolation, the negative impact on local economies, but that new forms of relationship and democracy have emerged. All cities have successful experiences; without the active participation of citizens it is impossible to get out of this crisis. In Iztapalapa we have listened to citizens, their demands and problems, generating a civic culture and habits, combining the virtual and the face-to-face. It is very important to compile and systematize this great number of experiences. The IOPD's work plan is an invitation to continue strengthening the relationship between governments and communities. It congratulates the city of Lima for having obtained the 15th IOPD Award and all the sister cities that participated and whose experiences are benchmarks of local participatory democracy. It also places itself at the disposal of Grenoble and wishes them all the best in the organization of the conference.

Marc Serra, councilor for citizen's rights and participation of Barcelona and Secretary General of the IOPD greets the membership and recalls that shortly after the assembly in Iztapalapa the pandemic began with health, economic and social consequences.

Participation and democracy have also been affected, but we can congratulate ourselves because the IOPD has been a useful space to provide answers to isolation. As we will see in the management report, we have been very active during this last year. He appreciates the work of Cocody and congratulates the mayor for the success of the conference which shows that we must get out of this crisis with more and better democracy. He highlights the virtual sessions that have been organized around the climate emergency, feminism and local democracy. issues that concern us. The objective for 2022 is to take action as proposed by Grenoble. He comments on the agenda of the meeting: management report, work plan with the prioritization of the themes and new responsibilities, finally to choose the venue of the 2023 conference, for which three good candidatures are presented. The secretary general is pleased that thanks to the teamwork of the coordination committee the IOPD works better and encourages the membership to participate in the governance of the network, as more horizontal and more distributed more impact. Good wishes for this assembly and looking forward to leaving with a clear roadmap.

José Manuel Ribeiro, mayor of Valongo states that as he said in Iztapalapa, Valongo would like to be able to organize the IOPD conference in 2024.

MANAGEMENT REPORT

Adrià Duarte, IOPD coordinator presents the management report of the network in 2021 that has been shared previously. Throughout the year, the work started in 2020 to organize various virtual activities has been continued. Such as the seminars on participatory budgeting and climate change, the contribution session to the GOLD report, the Intermediary Cities Forum, among many others. The Secretariat edits the videos and contents of the sessions and publishes them on the website. A very active work has been carried out with UCLG, which will continue in the coming year. In relation to the 2021 award, the 51 candidatures that were submitted underwent two phases of evaluation: one open and the other by a jury, which met for the first time to deliberate on the candidatures. The results were announced at the UCLG World Council, and the award publications are now available. In addition to accompanying the organization of the conference in Cocody, three virtual sessions have been organized with the participation of IOPD cities and experts on: ecological transformation; local democracy; municipalism, social movements and feminist approaches.

Regarding the financial report, the coordinator emphasizes that it is a modest budget that depends on contributions from a few cities, especially Barcelona, as well as Montréal, Grenoble, Valongo and Bordeaux. The main expenses are staff, interpretation, edition of publications, website maintenance, consultants' fees and travel. The coordinator encourages other cities to contribute to the network in order to improve its capacity for action.

Jean-Marc Yace, mayor of Cocody announces that Cocody will also contribute to the financing of the IOPD technical secretariat with a sum to be determined. He apologized for having to leave the meeting and handed over his representation to Deputy Mayor Nelly Ouassenan.

2022 WORK PLAN

Thematic priorities

The current thematic priorities are: a) citizen participation and ecological transition, b) gender perspective and feminist approaches in participatory democracy. The proposal is to maintain these two and add a third, other themes would be part of some new working group.

Antonio Hernández, director of Corporación Plurales, congratulates the work done and proposes a work theme around the post-pandemic social and economic reactivation alternatives that emerge from the community, from civil society organizations and with women's leadership.

Diego Fernandez, director of the local democracy mission in Grenoble proposes a cross-cutting theme of work which is the valorization and capitalization of the experiences that have already been carried out. Concretely to follow up on these experiences, 1 or 5 years later, what is the continuation and the impact of these experiences. To have a retrospective look, to see what they have achieved, to systematize this information and to show it to other local governments to encourage them to deploy participation ecosystems. These results could be presented at the Grenoble 2022 conference.

Mariano Bareiro of the Federation of Neighborhood Organizations of Paraguay (FEDEM) explains that December 5 is celebrated as Volunteer Day and proposes that for the agenda of the 2022 conference we talk about volunteering as a specific topic.

Eduardo Merodio, president of IDEPA - Institute for the Development of Participatory Democracy, proposes to begin to address the issue of facilitators through a working group of people who are dedicated to the facilitation of participatory processes through methodologies, experiences, where they can learn and improve.

Bachir Kanouté, coordinator of IOPD Africa, explains that the political bodies of IOPD Africa have been set up in each sub-region. He also proposes the creation of a working group to develop an index to measure the quality of participatory democracy. It is important for the IOPD to have a tool, a method and an approach to help the people and actors involved, such as local authorities, to measure the quality and functioning of their local democracy, and thus be able to make improvements. As references, he cites examples of indicators on human development, corruption, transparency or others. The objective of the IOPD should be to preserve and improve the quality of progress in participatory democracy, and this index should be a tool for this purpose.

Juan Speroni, General Director of Citizen Participation and Proximity of the Government of the City of Buenos Aires, proposes working on actions that can be carried out multilaterally but in a coordinated manner and that have a real impact. Faced with global and common problems, and with societies that ask us for concrete answers, we have to be able to respond to these challenges.

Calendar of activities

Adrià Duarte presents the calendar of the most important activities for 2022:

- UCLG Retreat: 21/25 February 2022
- Africities - 17/21 May 2022, Kisumu, Kenya
- WUF 11 - World Urban Forum 11, 26-30 June 2022, Katowice, Poland
- UCLG Congress 10/14 October 2022, Daejeon, South Korea
- COP 27- 7/18 November, Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt
- IOPD Conference in Grenoble, 7/10 December 2022

2022 Award

The idea is to continue with the same format of double evaluation by the jury. On the other hand, a city or institution is invited to make an economic contribution to sponsor the award and to be able to offer a monetary reward to the winner and remunerate the members of the jury.

2022 Conference

Adrià Duarte invites the membership to participate in the elaboration of the program and agenda, and also to organize preparatory meetings to feed the event.

The coordinator also reaffirms the commitment to work together with the UCLG secretariat, especially in an online course with the learning team. Another commitment made during the Cocody conference is to do a work of recovery of the history of the IOPD, as a network from its origins, to improve the narrative of our organization.

Sara Hoeflich, director of UCLG's learning area, points out that we need to take advantage of all the resources and materials accumulated by the IOPD over the last few years to share them with a wider audience. The idea is to create a module to share these contents in a pedagogical key to allow more people to think about democracy, and it is the beginning of a more ambitious path to think about methodologies for young people and educational material to explain what democracy is.

Rocío Lombera, Director of Participation and Planning of Iztapalapa, highlights and supports Eduardo Merodio's proposal, which is also linked to the idea of systematizing methodologies and the role of facilitation. Also, as has been said, based on the history of OIDP, to highlight experiences and systematize based on thematic axes, to create a systematization methodology that allows us to homogenize what we can highlight from each experience.

The IOPD coordinator announces that he will contact all those who have proposed topics and working groups to detail and formalize these ideas.

Summary of proposals

- Working group of facilitators of participatory processes
- Working group or line of work to elaborate a quality index of participatory democracy.

PRESENTATION OF THE 2022 IOPD CONFERENCE

Eric Piolle, Mayor of Grenoble and President of the IOPD

The Mayor of Grenoble, after the protocol greetings, welcomed the opportunity to host the IOPD conference and assembly from December 7 to 10, 2022. He pointed out that his city and its surroundings have a particular history, from the commitment to hydroelectric power at the time of the oil boom to the fraternity of the first solidarity mutual insurance and workers' cooperatives. It also highlights the important role of the resistance against the Nazi occupation during the Second World War and a pioneering place in the fight for male-female equality with the example of the first family planning center in France. The city is currently leading the fight for the recognition of the right to vote for migrants.

The city of Grenoble is and has been a pioneer in the ecological transition. In the 1980s, it revived the urban tramway, pedestrianized the streets in front of schools, and is on the verge of achieving 100% decarbonized and non-nuclear electricity. The City Council also wants to tackle hyper-consumerism by removing advertising from public spaces, and by promoting organic and local food. In 2022, Grenoble will be the European green capital chosen by the European Commission with three pillars: culture, science and citizen participation. Within the framework of this capital, the IOPD conference will take place under the theme "Passer à l'action, il est temps d'agir" (Take action, it's time to act) and will be organized in partnership with participatory networks in France such as Démocratie Ouverte, Décider Ensemble, l'Institut de la Participation et la Concertation, Réseau National des Budgets Participatifs, Réseau National des maisons de l'Association de France or the Réseau des Villes en Transition, among others. Institutional partnerships will also be established, such as with Grenoble-Alpes Métropoles and the Agence Grenoble Capitale Verte. The spirit is to bring together diverse experiences to create spaces for action in the face of the major challenges facing our societies. Awareness has already been raised, but now is the time to take action and accelerate transitions.

The challenge for local governments is to create environments and ecosystems that encourage citizens to assume common responsibilities and problems and to participate directly in the political process. Examples include shared habitats, community gardens, responsible consumption networks, among others. Faced with the climate emergency and the growing distrust in social and political institutions, we must move forward together, elected officials and citizens, to open these new spaces and solutions. We should not think that we will always go hand in hand, since democracy is continuously plagued by conflicts and contradictory interests. We should not deny these conflicts, but rather work on them on a democratic basis.

The IOPD Grenoble Conference should advocate the transformation and opening up of cities and territories to citizen initiatives, co-creation, to the commons in order to be able to act in the face of challenges. This major theme will be structured in three main blocks:

- The environmental transition in the face of the climate emergency from a democratic perspective. All mechanisms and actions of participatory and deliberative democracy to achieve the ecological transition.
- Social justice: guaranteeing security and equality for all in the face of inequalities and discrimination. Without social justice, no transformation is possible.
- How to give meaning to youth action: hope and renewal must be led by youth who are active in demands and actions, but we see that they refrain from participating in the institutional arena.

These three pillars will be developed in conferences, round tables and workshops in 7 venues that have already been chosen: theaters, museums, the City Hall and other emblematic spaces of the city. The aim is to involve the citizens of Grenobles and international participants and to make it a strong moment for the city and the work done in recent years, as well as a highlight of the European Green Capital 2022. The mayor ended his presentation by inviting everyone to participate in the Grenoble conference and sharing his desire to be able to celebrate the event and meet again.

A video of Grenoble European Green Capital 2022 is shared. You can retrieve the video with the intervention of Mayor Piolle (in French).

Marc Serra congratulates the mayor of Grenoble for the presentation and shares his enthusiasm for the 2022 conference project.

José Manuel Ribeiro also congratulates his counterpart and highlights the interesting program presented. He also offers to collaborate in everything necessary.

Mariano Bareiro raises the possibility that the South Americans could go to Grenoble to share their experiences and asks for possible help to cover the cost of the tickets.

Eric Piolle thanks the congratulations and the expressions of support, and reiterates his invitation to all to participate.

CHOICE OF VENUE FOR THE IDPPF CONFERENCE 2023

The Secretary General explains that three proposals have been submitted to host the IOPD conference in 2023: Bogota, Cordoba and Rio de Janeiro. The three cities have slots to present their candidacies in which they can share presentations and videos.

Juan Domingo Viola, Secretary of Citizen Participation of the Municipality of Cordoba presents the candidacy of the city of Cordoba to host the IOPD conference in 2023. First of all, he points out that Cordoba leads the IOPD antenna in Argentina and they want to continue with this role. In addition, the city is immersed in a process of reactivation and renewal of participatory processes and mechanisms. The thematic proposal for the conference is the territorialization of the SDGs and self-management. The conviction is that it is not possible to manage and move a city forward with only the state, with the public sector, and that the involvement of citizens is necessary. Decentralization, deconcentration and self-management are the axes of municipal management and they want them to be the axes of the 2023 conference. The Secretary also presented the city of Cordoba in terms of tourism and infrastructure to host an international event with guarantees, as well as the willingness to have the support of the national and provincial governments and the National University of Cordoba.

Daniel Mancebo, General Coordinator of the Planning Office of the Rio de Janeiro City Council, presents the candidacy of the city of Rio de Janeiro to host the IOPD conference in 2023. Rio has 6.7 million inhabitants and nearly 1,000 km² of surface area, and is a true city of cities with great demographic, social and cultural diversity. The instruments of participation have been evolving to achieve a more diverse and inclusive city, and to incorporate the citizen's vision into the city's strategic plans. As an example of participation for social transformation in the city, it presents the Sustainable Development and Climate Action Plan, an experience recognized with a special mention in the IOPD 2021 distinction. The participation of children and young people is transformative, it is the basis of our participation policy and of our candidacy to organize the conference in 2023. The proposed theme is "participatory democracy for diverse, inclusive and transparent cities".

He also presents the great cultural, natural and infrastructural heritage of the city to be able to host an international event. The City of Arts is proposed as a facility where the conference can be held, and it is announced that the Rio City Hall will be able to cover airfare and accommodation for international speakers, as well as lunches and a gala dinner for all participants.

A video of the city of Rio de Janeiro is shared

Alexander Reina, Director of the District Institute of Participation and Community Action of Bogota, presents the candidacy of the city of Bogota to host the IOPD conference in 2023. Bogota is a city with more than 7 million inhabitants, with a great social fabric, that has been building institutions to promote participation for more than 15 years and that constitutes a great laboratory of citizen participation experiences. The government of Mayor Claudia Lopez has a great political will to deepen participatory democracy and the city has a high level infrastructure to serve the participants. As a theme they propose "the analysis of the social outburst as a symptom of the crisis of the liberal democratic model and within the hegemonic approach to citizen participation". Methodologically, they propose to rely on Martha Nussbaum's analytical approach to emotions with three questions: what are or were the main frustrations after the social outbursts in the world? What lessons can be learned from the processes of social mobilization to deepen participatory democracy in the world? What achievements did social mobilization in the world have, in terms of transformation, that serve as an example to promote a more intense democracy?

¿Cuáles son o fueron las principales frustraciones luego de los estallidos sociales en el mundo?

¿Qué aprendizajes tenemos de resiliencia o se rescatan de los procesos de movilización social para profundizar la democracia participativa en el mundo?

¿Qué alcances tuvo, en materia de transformación, la movilización social en el mundo, que sirvan de ejemplo para promover una democracia más intensa?

To address these issues, it is proposed to organize academic conferences, exchange of experiences through workshops and artistic and cultural activities. The proposed dates are June or November 2023, since local and territorial elections will be held in October. It also presents budget projections to cover the organization of the event.

A video of the city of Bogota is shared

Marc Serra points out that we have three very good nominations and asks the technical secretariat to explain the voting system, which will be extended by 24 hours to allow all registered members to exercise their right to vote.

Adrià Duarte also congratulates the three cities and explains the electronic voting system that guarantees that only one vote is cast per registered member (local or regional government). Voting is done through the Participate.oidp.net platform that uses decidim software. Each census member must indicate a single email address where they will receive the link to vote. As some people have not received this email, we have proceeded to update these emails and therefore give a margin of 24 hours to ensure that everyone can exercise their right to vote.

Diego Fernández thanked the three cities that have applied and although we can only choose one, the desire is to be able to work with the three cities throughout the year. He invites the three cities to participate in the 2022 and 2023 conferences.

IOPD GOVERNANCE

The co-presidency as foreseen in the regulations must be formed by the mayor of the city organizing the conference in the current year and in the preceding year, therefore in 2022 the co-presidency will be formed by Eric Piolle, mayor of Grenoble and Jean-Marc Yace mayor of Cocody, the general secretariat remains in the hands of Barcelona, and the promoting members are Montréal and Valongo. All of them form the Coordination Committee. The floor was opened for interventions on the composition of the coordination committee.

Rocio Lombera from Iztapalapa offers to continue the work of supporting the IOPD by maintaining the co-presidency, and thus having a woman as co-president and maintaining the representation of Latin America.

Diego Fernandez points out that from Grenoble they have already spoken with Iztapalapa and it seems pertinent to them to maintain this co-presidency in the figure of Mayor Clara Brugada, with whom they share a political agenda in feminism, gender perspective and participatory democracy.

Marc Serra on behalf of the city of Barcelona also defends this proposal to maintain Clara Brugada in the co-presidency to guarantee as far as possible gender equity and recognizing all the contributions of Iztapalapa to the IOPD in recent years.

Mariano Bareiro also supports the motion.

The Secretary General asks if anyone objects to this proposal. Since there were no objections, it was approved that Iztapalapa maintain the co-presidency in 2022.

Rocío Lombera thanks the endorsements and reiterates the support for the next conference and the work of the IOPD.

Marc Serra asks if any other city wants to step forward to contribute something to the IOPD such as being part of the coordination committee.

Mohamed Wajdi Aydi, deputy mayor of Sfax, proposes his city to integrate the coordination committee. Sfax as the second most populous city in Tunisia is immersed in the birth of local democracy in his country since the first local elections in 2018. It has also implemented various participatory experiences such as the participatory budget or the participatory investment program. He also notes that his city is twinned with the city of Grenoble, and actively participates in UCLG.

Bachir Kanouté shows his support for Sfax's candidacy.

Rocío Lombera announces that Iztapalapa wants to organize a forum on participation in the recovery of public space, and is open to incorporating this event into the IOPD work plan.

Gisela Barbosa from the municipality of Valongo reiterated the commitment of her mayor and city council to the IOPD work plan.

OPEN ROUND OF INTERVENTIONS

Elizabeth Santos, from the Alianza Venezolana para el Derecho a la Vivienda explains that the new local authorities that emerged from the last elections may be interested in participating in IOPD.

A representative of the municipality of Milange recalls that in the context of the pandemic, local authorities must seek solutions for sustainable development, then congratulates the municipality of Cocody for the organization of the 2021 conference and the city of Grenoble which will organize the conference in 2022. If the pandemic allows it, they wish to be able to participate in the 2022 event. Recalls and reaffirms the demand that the Portuguese language be a working language of OIDP, and that we have simultaneous interpretation at the next conference.

Adrià Duarte said that we take note of the request to include the Portuguese language.

Ibrahima Niang, from the Association Mauritanienne des Communes du Sud (AMCS) insists on Bachir Kanouté's proposal to be able to evaluate every year the state and evolution of participatory governance. The AMCS wants to collaborate more with OIDP and to be a reference at the Mauritanian level to involve the state and the country's municipalities.

Espérance Kaj, from Action Solidaire de la Jeunesse pour le Développement Communautaire, ASOJEDEC, regrets that the local authorities of her country (RD Congo) are not participating in the IOPD Assembly.

Adrià Duarte recalls the voting instructions and reiterates the commitment to make the 2022 conference a success.

Marc Serra thanks everyone for their commitment and participation. He affirms that we leave with a reinforced work plan and with a very exciting conference.

The IOPD General Assembly ends at 17:30 CET, waiting to close the vote on the election of the venue for the 2023 conference.
