At the IOPD General Assembly in December 2021, it was proposed that the IOPD lead the creation of a Participatory Democracy Quality Index (IDP). The objective of this index is to be able to measure the implementation of participatory democracy at the local and regional level, and to see its evolution over time.

The IDP will collect lessons learned and provide an action-oriented methodology for improving the quality of participatory democracy through an index and the publication of an annual report on the situation of participative democracy.

To this end, the IOPD has created a working group in which it invites the members of the IOPD to collaborate in the creation and implementation of this tool.

Agenda of the meeting

- Welcome and technical questions
- Presentation of the framing note
- Open floor for reactions to the idea of the Index
- Operational discussion: how do we organize the working group for the elaboration process
- Brainstorming and discussion on the indicators to be included
